Education Counts.

Ruin Smith? Maybe.

Nature Turns Modernist.

One Press Agent.

By Arthur Brisbane

The Chinese riots and multiple civil wars frighten upper class Chinese and drive them to foreign countries.

That's bad for China. Many of the upper class, the moron, parasite, spendthrift class, so carefully described here in "society news," could be spared advantageously.

But real work is done by trained minds, and any really able mind usually has several generations of training behind it—although the owner may not know it. The slowest thoroughbred horse can run faster that the fastest cart horse.

That was proved in the French revolution, on which the French republic is based. The revolution was created by the greatest minds in France; they prepared the revolution in advance. It was carried through by educated men exclusively—Danton, Mirabeau, Robespierre, Marat.

The workers of the lower class howled around the guillotine, demanding more heads, but did nothing of importance, except supply numbers.

Unthinking in the revolution, they were just as unthinking when Napoleon herded them together and drove them around Europe to be shot for his glory.

They kissed the hem of his imperial coat, as they had howled for the royal head of Louis. The Chinese will miss their thinking men. Their departure will make it easy for Europe to continue in control of huge China.

Mr. Anderson, recently released from prison—he says he was not guilty—has definite plans for a new secret society, the A. P. P. P. P. A., or American Prohibition, Protestant, Protective, Patriotic Alliance."

That alliance will unite with the Ku Klux Klan to drive from office Governor Smith, who is a Catholic, and prevent his nomination for the presidency by the Democrats.

It's an interesting program, but if the Rev. Dr. Burchard were alive he could tell Mr. Anderson that such plans sometimes go wrong.

Dr. Burchard had only three letters, R. R. R., as against Mr. Anderson's six, but the three Burchard words, "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" contained the nucleus of the Anderson idea.

Nevertheless they defeated Blaine, whom Burchard wanted to help.

Nature seems also to be turning "modernist," with the accompanying indifference to established respectabilities and taboos.

The other day, in one single storm lightning struck the Natural History Museum in New York, as you have read, set fire to a hospital and shattered the great cross on top of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

On Friday last fire wrecked Christ Episcopal Protestant church in New York, burning out the pews and destroying the altar.

In old days the faithful would have expected a miracle to put out the fire. But in these days nature seems to know no favoritism—church, cathedral that cures soul-, or hospital where bodies are treated, or museum that disturbs weak religious souls by proving that the earth is a billion years old and that Noah's ark could not have carried 1 per cent of living creatures. They are alike to nature and her laws. The lightning strikes one as it does the other.

"Let him that deserves it wear the palm."

One large palm should be worn by a Yankee moving picture press agent now discussed by Englishmen. The British had decided that Americans must cease invading the empire with their moving pictures, "presenting false ideas of life."

Then along came the press agent from America, with his "precious film insured for a million dollars." In Southampton that guileful American told an innocent British colonel that he ought to escort the film to London and have moving pictures taken of his fine regiment and band.

LEADER LACKING TO FILL PLACE OF LA FOLLETTE

DEVELOPMENTS OF COMING YEAR WILL DETERMINE FATE OF PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT IN NATION

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington — Upon the next twelvemont's political developments growing out of Senator Robert M. La Follette's death depends national Progressive-ism's future, perhaps for many years.

Is Progressive-ism a movement of which La Follette was no more than a part—a mighty important part—but only a part?

Or was he the whole thing?

If the formers' the case, of course, even the death of a strong leader can spell no more than a temporary setback, a little more delay.

If the latter, the cause, too, is dead.

To be sure, there'll be progress, with a small "p," but the group the Wisconsin senator led inevitably will break up—various political careers probably will end with the expiration of current terms.

No Firm Alignment

One thing which suggests weakness, at first thought, may prove to be Progressive-ism's strength—though referred to as a "bloc," it never was a hard-and-fast alignment, like a party, with regular adherents, requiring to be led.

Still, La Follette did sound the call for every rally which the independents made.

Will somebody else be found to do this in his place? Or is no particular leader needed?

The next session of Congress will begin to show. Administration spokesmen profess to feel sure already that insurgency is a thing of the past.

No Success in Sight

If Progressive-ism's fate depends on a successor to La Follette who can fill his shoes, nobody's in sight.

Senator Borah has the necessary qualities of strength, courage and magnetism, but he isn't a Progressive—with a big "P"—all the time. A follower may be a part-timer, but a leader must be consistently on the job.

Senator Norris is so regular in his Progressive-ism as to be almost the real thing, but he hasn't the pugnacity La Follette possessed. He can put up a terrific fight when he likes, but he doesn't always like.

Senator Wheeler's a "whole hog" Progressive and nobody ever was leadier for a scrap, but he isn't as yet, a political heavyweight, which is essential in this case.

Besides, he's a Democrat, and to be effective at this time, Progressive-ism needs to draw from the Republicans' strength.

That about exhausts the list of availables.

Progressive-ism, if it's to survive without La Follette, must survive on its own merits. It can't hope to be pulled through by virtue of strong leadership.

This, of course, refers to the Progressive-ism which was launched at the Cleveland conference of a year ago.

Something else may develop later along the same lines. That's a different thing.

Regulars Hopeful

Needless to say, the regular Republicans will spare no effort, having been afflicted far worse by Progressive-ism than it has troubled the Democrats, to make Wisconsin safe for regularity at the election of 1926.

With La Follette gone, they are much more hopeful of Senator Lenroot's return to the upper house and hopes are expressed of putting a regular in La Follette's own seat.

They can't do this until November of next year, since the vacancy will be filled temporarily by Governor Blaine's appointment, and, as he is a Progressive himself, a Progressive will be his choice.

One remark by Senator Wheeler may prove significant—that "La Follette dead will be more powerful even than La Follette alive."

This isn't impossible. His name may become one to conjure by.

With his death, much of the battlement which was built toward that living will disappear.

Idealized, it is quite likely there will be immense strength for the cause he preached in his memory—perhaps a strength greater than his own, a living man on the Senate floor.

One Killed, One Injured In La Crosse Auto Crash

(By Associated Press)

La Crosse, Wis., June 29—Harold Oyen, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Oyen, was killed, and Robert Huttgen, 24, badly cut and bruised when a car in which they were riding crashed into a tree on the edge of the highway near here. Blinding headlights of an approaching car are attributed as the cause of the accident.

John Coolidge, son of the president, is spending his vacation on his grandfather's farm at Plymouth, Vt., chopping wood for the winter, mending the roof and doing odd "chores."

SESSION CLOSES AFTER 166 DAYS

FIFTY-SEVENTH WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE COMPLETES WORK TODAY; MEMBERS LOOK TOWARD 1926

(By Associated Press)

Madison, June 29.— Wisconsin's fifty-seventh legislature today quietly slipped into history. It adjourned sine die at 1:30 p. m. with only a dozen members of the two houses present.

All vetoes were sustained. The senate tabled measures returned to it with executive disapproval and the half dozen assembly members murmured negative responses to calls for votes on the question of overriding vetoes.

Four interim committees were named by Lieutenant Governor Huber and Speaker Sachtjen. They are taxation and departmental consolidation; La Follette memorial; Philipp memorial and Mississippi river pollution.

The vetoes included disapproval of a bill basing high school tuition upon the expense of maintaining the school. The governor said he felt it would give little relief and suggested that the question be considered by the interim committee on taxation.

Membership Long Unchanged

The Wisconsin legislature has had 133 members since Jan. 12 1862, a period of 63 years. The last apportionment of districts was in 1922, when several changes were made shifting territory to correspond with a shift of population. From 1848 to 1853 the legislature had 85 members; from 1853 to 1857, it had 107 members and from 1858 to 1862, its number was 127.

The shortest legislative session in Wisconsin history was the third, in 1850, a total of 34 days, beginning Jan. 9, and ending Feb. 11. The longest session was the fifty-first beginning Jan. 13, 1915 and ending August 24 of the same year, 223 days. A special one may so stand the same year was called for the purpose of taking the seiner ballots to the Mexican border, where the state national guard was encamped.

Shift in Control Likely

At the close of the fifty-seventh session, interest in the complexion of the fifty-eighth was a live topic in the statehouse. A complete turnover in control in the state senate next session is regarded as virtually certain by Senator C. B. Casperson and other progressives opposed to the administration of Governor Blaine. Senator W. L. Smith, leader of the conservative group, asserts there is every indication that new conservative strength will come to the senate from the seventh, fifteenth, seventeenth, twenty-first and twenty-seventh, with possible reinforcements from the twenty-fifth and thirty-first districts.

In the assembly race a bitter fight for control is anticipated with more than half of the members of the present session participating as candidates for reelection, according to early forecasts.

Father Of President Safe Today

(By Associated Press)

Plymouth, Vt., June 29—Physicians attending Col. John Coolidge this afternoon stated that the president's father was getting along better than they had expected. They were of the opinion that he was out of danger.

President Coolidge was called to his father's bedside yesterday from his vacation home at Swampscott, Mass.

Federal Dry Force Will Suffer Cut

(By Associated Press)

Washington, June 29—A sweeping reduction in the prohibition agent forces and the dropping of 400 persons from Washington prohibition headquarters personnel is planned under the newly ordered decentralization program of the treasury department.

The field enforcement, which will be under 22 administrators throughout the country, will employ 200 general agents instead of the 600 now on the rolls.

Police Give Gypsy Band Keys to City's Exit Gate

Arriving in this city early this morning and commencing panhandling operations at the west edge of town soon after their arrival, a large band of gypsies were given the keys to the gate of the city by Chief Payne—only the keys had to the exit gate. As soon as a group of the west side had notified police headquarters of the presence of the gypsies Chief Payne and Officer Byrd rounded up the band and showed them the quickest way out of town, escorting them several miles into the country. From the north side they were told to take the party and keep moving, a large number of the whole band would be looking for them returning here.

Professor Ely Makes Gift of Scholarship

Madison, Wis.—A gift of $5,000 for a scholarship at the University of Wisconsin has just been made by Prof. Richard T. Ely of the department of economics as a memorial to his wife. The endowment will be called the "Anna Morris Ely scholarship in economics". In order that the scholarship may be available for use this next fall, Dr. Ely has given an additional $250 to take the place of the first year's income. The scholarship is available to any student in economics recommended by the department.

MONTANA QUAKE LOSS $500,000; NO FATALITIES

FOUR STATES FEEL FORCE OF SHOCK YESTERDAY; SLIDES BLOCK MILWAUKEE ROAD TRACKS

(By Associated Press)

Helena, Mont., June 29.—Residents of the Gallatin valley, the apparent center of the earthquake which shook four states Saturday night and yesterday, fastidiously remained out in the wide open spaces today looking back at $500,000 worth of ruin—the aggregate cost of the tremor.

It was a whimsical earthquake. No one was killed.

Trains Are Released

Nearly a score of buildings cracked and fell. There were half a dozen land slides. A crevice extending at erratic intervals from Manhattan to Three Forks, a distance of 10 miles, remains as one of the scars caused by the quakes. The Lombard tunnel of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad suffered a cave-in. An avalanche at Deer Park covered 500 feet of railroad track nearby leaving it buried under earth and rocks over 100 feet deep. This was caused when a cliff 800 feet high toppled and fell.

The three trains which were hemmed in Saturday night by the avalanche were released today.

Citizens Flee Towns

The quake began about 6:2 o'clock Saturday night. Thousands of persons in Butte, Great Falls, Billings, Livingston and Helena and other cities and towns were thrown into a panic and they ran clear of the buildings. The shocks continued intermittently until well after 10 o'clock Sunday. There were slight recurrences at Three Forks, while White Sulphur Springs and Anaconda reported slight shocks today. Three Forks and Logan, all near the junction of the Madison, Gallatin and Jefferson rivers which form the source of the Missouri, suffered the greatest losses. The court house at White Sulphur Springs fell and several smaller structures were demolished. The loss there will exceed $100,000 it is said, and at Three Forks where the damage was great the loss will be about $200,000, the report said. Three Forks residents counted 11 distinct shocks.

Yellowstone Park Safe

The natural wonders of Yellowstone National park were left undisturbed by the quakes.

Park officials said after a check up in various centers of the national preserve that although a huge boulder fell from a mountainside formation and blocked the highway near Mammoth, Mont., all of the scenic formations and geysers were unharmed.

Approximately six thousand tourists in the park are calm.

In the three other states, Idaho, Washington, and Wyoming, the tremors were slight and no material damage was recorded.

Schofield Man Drowns As Waves Tip Boat Over

(By Associated Press)

Wausau, Wis., June 29.—Frank Teresinski of Schofield, an employe of the Marathon Paper Mills company of Rothschild, was drowned late yesterday in Rolling Stone lake when the boat in which he and two companions were fishing was capsized by the high waves. The body had not been recovered early today. His companions held onto the boat which had overturned until rescued a half hour later.

Town of Wood Man Gets Six Years At Waupun

Pleading guilty to the charge of rape perpetrated upon a fourteen year old town of Wood girl, William McBurney, 29, town of Wood, was given a sentence of six years in the state prison at Waupun by Judge B. B. Park at Stevens Point this afternoon. McBurney was arrested by Deputy Sheriff George Favelle of Pittsville.

The crime occurred last night while the couple were returning from a dance at Bakerville. After arrest the man was brought before Judge E. N. Pomainville of this city yesterday morning and pleaded guilty to the charge. He was taken to Stevens Point this afternoon and after pleading guilty was given the six year sentence.

Given Fine and Costs

Russell Fairfield, Nekoosa, was given a fine and costs in Judge E. N. Pomainville's court this morning on the charge of assault and battery against his wife. Officer John Buchanan of Nekoosa made the arrest. In court the wife refused to testify against the defendant.

Sight Armed Fugitives From Michigan Prison; Gun Battle Is Expected

BULLETIN

(By Associated Press)

Marquette, Mich.—Five hundred dollars reward each for the four prisoners escaped from Marquette prison was offered by Warden James E. Corrigan this afternoon.

(By Associated Press)

Marquette, Mich., June 29—Capture of the four convicts who yesterday made their escape from the Marquette branch prison was expected momentarily this afternoon when they were seen riding in a box car on the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad at 12:30 p. m.

The railroad passes within a stone's throw of the prison and as the train crossed over Carp river bridge a clerk at the prison, Arthur E. Anderson, who was driving on a road paralleling the track, saw the men, and immediately he turned his machine about and notified the prison authorities.

Word was then sent to Sheriff Runsatt at Munising and he left with a group of officials for a nearby junction point where they expected they would meet the train.

Made Daring Escape

Forcing two guards to act as shields to prevent their being fired at by other officers from the wall or yard, the four inmates of the Marquette branch prison, each armed with an automatic revolver, late Sunday accomplished the most daring escape ever attempted in that institution.

The fugitives had two bags of ammunition for their weapons, and it is expected that their apprehension will be accomplished only after a gun fight.

Will Shoot to Kill

The territory surrounding Marquette is being scoured by county officials, guards from the prison, and state police armed with revolvers and rifles, and working under orders to shoot the fugitives on sight.

The fugitives are: Eddie Weisman, serving 15 to 30 years for armed robbery; Vance Hardy, serving 20 to 40 years for armed robbery; Joe de Flora, serving life, and Isadore Londe, also serving life. All were sentenced from Detroit.

15 Die When Liner Hits Schooner

(By Associated Press)

Gloucester, Mass., June 29.—Fifteen men were drowned and nine others, employes of the crew of the fishing schooner Rex of this port, rescued when the boat was sunk in a collision with a Cunard Anchor line steamer Tuscania 200 miles east of Halifax. Beyond the meager message received that the ship owned by the Anchor line reported the disaster, no word had come to amplify the details. The Tuscania, which struck the little fishing craft during a fog, reported herself standing by searching for possible survivors and bodies. The mast of the sunken vessel produced Thomas Downey of Lowell, who was picked up dead.

Officials of the Fred L. Davis company, owner of the Rex, believed that many of the ships crew were killed beneath the deck in their bunks, and that others standing by were hit by timbers and sank before they regained consciousness.

Zona Gale Urged For Senate Seat

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, June 29—Governor J. J. Blaine of Wisconsin today was asked in a telegram sent by Margaret Whittemore of the National Woman's party to appoint Miss Zona Gale of Portage, Wis., authoress, United States senator to succeed the late Robert M. La Follette.

The telegram urged the appointment of a woman because "Wisconsin was the first state to pass an equal rights bill."

Miss Gale was a member of the executive committee of the LaFollette presidential campaign organization last year and also is a member of the executive committee of the National Woman's party.

Church Burns As Crowd Celebrates Silver Jubilee

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., June 29—While 1,500 persons yesterday afternoon were attending the silver jubilee of the St. William's church at Paoli, 16 miles southwest of Madison, the structure caught fire and the parish was destroyed. The fire, of unknown origin, started in a barn near the church and jumped to the church and other nearby buildings.

A strong west wind carried sparks for a quarter of a mile and the entire village was threatened. Firemen from Verona and Belleville came to fight the fire. Furniture in the church was saved.

Rev. Francis Schwinn of Watertown, Wis., who said the first mass in the new structure 25 years ago, also read the last mass. He said a solemn high mass at the opening of the celebration Sunday morning. It is estimated that replacement of the church will cost more than $50,000.

Ask Authority to Build New Badger Rail Line

Madison, Wis., June 29—Application of the Wisconsin Southern Railway company for permission to build and operate part of its chartered line between Manitowoc and Sturgeon Bay has been set for oral hearing before the state railroad commission here July 22.

LAY PLANS FOR DEFENSE TEST

AMERICAN LEGION WILL ARRANGE FOR OBSERVANCE OF DAY IN WISCONSIN RAPIDS JULY 4.

Defense Day, which his year falls upon July Fourth, will be observed in Wisconsin Rapids, due almost exclusively to the efforts of the Charles Hagerstrom Post No. 9, American Legion. A committee composed of Commander F. X. Pomainville, Adjutant W. G. Merrill and Myron Hill was appointed at the last meeting of the local post to make preparations for the observance of Defense Day. The Post will follow out the plan suggested by the American Legion headquarters and the War Department, it was stated. The committee will announce on Tuesday the time and place of a meeting to carry out the plans.

Many Representatives

Manufacturers, business men, city officials and professional men will meet with Legion posts throughout the country and will be requested to do so in Wisconsin Rapids according to the tentative arrangements of the committee.

The purpose of the meeting deals with plans and preparations, if ever necessary, fo rthe mobilization, the billeting and hospitalization of men should such a movement become needed in a national emergency. It is understood that no military display will be made and no parades or other demonstrations held.

In other states where Defense Day is recognized, National Guard units would participate in any preparations for defense, but in Wisconsin the guard is prohibited from cooperation because of the position taken in opposition to the plan by the governor.

Officials and committeemen point out that the Legion is in itself a pacifistic organization and the members want war done away with, as they claim that they have all seen all the war they care for. It is said however that the organization realizes that peace can not be promoted by presenting a totally defenseless front to the rest of the world, which is still armed and still prepared to take up arms to enforce its viewpoints.

Cite Drain's Statement

The Legion's position regarding the Defense Day matter and toward preparedness in general is given in a recent statement of the National Commander, James A. Drain, which follows in part.

"The policy of the American Legion toward preparedness is fixed and settled beyond any question. The Legion is for a sound program of preparedness because it believes that to be a guard against war as well as a way to avoid helplessness if war is forced upon the country.

"No man in the country has a better right to talk about war and peace than the Legionnaire. He thinks so highly of peace that he is willing to fight for it. And he knows war and its horrors so well that he would never willingly see his country enter into a war except in defense of a vital principle . . . The support of the army, navy, marine corps, national guard, organized reserve, citizens military training camps and the National Defense Test Day are a matter of course. The support by each of the organizations of all of the others as each exists only to be of service to the country, should also be a foregone conclusion."

REPORT 12 DEAD, 10 MILLION LOSS IN RESORT CITY

EARTH SHOCK IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TODAY EQUALS FRISCO QUAKE IN INTENSITY

(By Associated Press)

San Barbara, Cal., June 29—Ten million dollars damage, 12 known dead and virtual destruction of most of the business buildings on State street resulted from an earthquake here at 6:45 a. m. today. The scene of the destruction was visited by a staff man from the Los Angeles office of the Associated Press.

The quake damaged practically all structures in the city and wrecking several of the largest buildings.

One of the known dead, a Mrs. Perkins, wife of a wealthy railroad man, was killed in the collapse of a wing of her hotel. The other persons were found in the wreckage of business buildings on State street. They have not been identified.

The earthquake appeared to center in the business district. There were two separate shocks, at 6:45 and 6:47, followed by about 20 others of minor violence.

Breaks Water and Gas Mains

Survivors of the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 residing in Santa Barbara declared that today's shock exceeded the San Francisco tremor in violence.

The force of the earthquake broke water and gas mains, snapped telephone and telegraph wires, and broke the reservoir supplying the city with water. Telephone communication with Los Angeles was resumed about 10:55 a. m. when a single line in a garage was found to be functioning.

Two fires started in the city, but so far little damage has been reported done by these.

The main street of the city upheaved and buckled under the tremors and as the water mains parted geysers shot up through the pavement.

Accompanying the quake were tremendous waves which rushed in from the bay and flooded the lowlands.

Buildings Demolished

The San Marcos building, largest business structure in the city, completely collapsed along one third of its length.

The Hotel Arlington and the San Francisco hotel were completely destroyed.

It is impossible to drive down State street because of the debris from the wrecked building that blocked the streets.

According to the latest information, bank buildings, the city library and city hall, a Catholic church and a school has been added to the list of the more important buildings either wrecked or damaged by the quake.

Famed As Resort

Santa Barbara, seat of an old French Franciscan mission dating back to 1786, is one of the famous watering places of America. Its beautiful situation, partly encircled by hills and mountains, has given it the name as the Mentone of America. It is 367 miles from San Francisco and 104 from Los Angeles.

Santa Barbara has long been noted for its big tourists' hotels and its mild climate, both of which features drew thousands of visitors annually from all over the world. The report said that most of the hotels had been destroyed.

Santa Barbara has more claim to fame than a tourist attraction. It is in the middle of a vast citrus fruit area, and flowers are grown here in tropical luxuriance. Its present permanent population is estimated at approximately 25,000.

(By Associated Press)

San Francisco, Cal., June 29.—The Southern Pacific dispatcher at Naples 10 miles south west of Santa Barbara, reported another severe earthquake shock at 11:30 o'clock. The dispatcher dropped the telephone and fled.

Record Second Quake

San Jose, Cal., June 29.—A second earthquake less severe than the one which wrought havoc in Santa Barbara today was recorded by the instrument at Santa Clara college at 10:15 a. m. today. The first shock at 6:45 a. m. this morning was the most severe, according to the college, since 1911.

Hears Track Turn Up

New York, June 29—Hugh Neill, vice president of the Southern Pacific railroad, was informed this afternoon that 250 miles of the company's railroad tracks north of Los Angeles had been torn up by the the earthquake.

Mr. Neill also was informed that the Southern Pacific station in Santa Barbara was razed. He also received confirmation that the company's roundhouse is down.

The railroad company had succeeded in getting one telephone line linked up with Santa Barbara, he said.

Only 8 Miles Lost

San Francisco, Cal., June 29—The Southern Pacific company reported here that but eight miles of its tracks were affected by the Santa Barbara earthquake. Trains can reach Santa Barbara from Los Angeles, and southbound trains can go as far as Goleta, eight miles from that city. Traffic is being routed by way of San Joaquin valley, and the company reports all trains are going through on time.

Mrs. Ella Zeller of Nekoosa Dies; Well Known Here

Mrs. Ella Zeller of Nekoosa passed away at the age of 36 years in the St. Joseph's hospital of Marshfield this morning shortly after six o'clock. She had been ill with cancer of the stomach for a number of years.

Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock Thursday morning from the Sacred Heart church of Nekoosa, the Rev. Father Van Ernst of Sparta, Wis., officiating in the absence of Father Joseph Feldmann, who is touring Europe.

Mrs. Zeller was well known in Nekoosa and Wisconsin Rapids where she had spent her entire life. She worked for Johnson & Hill company for five years, and had been employed in other business establishments in this city.

The deceased is survived by her daughter, Miss Bernice Zeller, 17, her husband having died three months after the birth of his daughter. Four sisters and three brothers who will attend the funeral are: Tony Edwards, Wisconsin Rapids; Mrs. Arthur Henning, Manitowoc; Mrs. Herb Sarney, and Carl Edwards, Janesville; Joe Edwards and Mrs. Clifford Gray of Nekoosa; and Mrs. Anna Zeller of Spokane, Wash. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edwards of Nekoosa, her father and mother, also survive.

CLERGY ATTEND SUMMER SCHOOL

ANNUAL UNIVERSITY SESSIONS FOR RURAL CHURCH WORKERS OPEN TODAY AT MADISON

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., June 29.—Clergymen of various denominations enrolled here today for the fourth annual Wisconsin Rural Church Summer school, conducted by the University of Wisconsin. Classes will be held daily during the two weeks of the school, closing July 11.

To meet the requirements of those returning to the school for the second year, a new cycle including courses in rural sociology, cooperative marketing methods, and demonstrations in various phases of rural work, has been added to this year's schedule.

Other subjects that will be studied in the school include agricultural economics, community organization, home economics, auto-mechanics, poultry raising, stock judging, and other related subjects. Instruction is largely carried on by members of the Wisconsin faculty.

Discuss Problems

The conferences are participated in by both clergy and laity, but a special feature of the school is the group plan under which the representatives of the various denominations may discuss problems in which all are alike interested and then later divide daily into groups for the discussion of the special problems which each church faces.

Group meetings will be held daily at 11 o'clock extending over the luncheon period. The Catholic group will be in charge of Dr. Muench, Milwaukee, or Rev. William McDermott, Racine, the Episcopalian group, Rev. Goodwin, New York city, and the home missions council group, Dr. Vermilya, New York city.

Notables Will Assist

Among those who will assist the university instructors in conducting the school are Ralph S. Adams, commission of social service and rural work, Reformed church in the United States, Philadelphia; Rev. William P. McDermott, Racine; and Dr. Edmund de S. Brunner, New York city.

Evening programs to be held during the term of the school include community singing under the direction of Prof. F. B. Gordon, motion pictures, group recreation, campus excursions to Indian mounds and other historical places, social hours at campfire and informal group conferences. All but the last two programs are held in connection with the regular summer session, and participated in by the clergy as they may desire.

advertise the noble British soldiers and stimulate recruiting.

And the poor Britisher "fell." He marched his men, band playing, through the streets of London, escorting the American film right to the office of the moving pitcure concern. Then light dawned upon him, and now he says: "I am fed up, sick and tired of the whole business. The Americans are too clever for us."

We are not exactly that; we can't write half as well as Shakespeare, or borrow as well as Balfour. We DO have good press agents.

Will Camp at Sparta

The annual summer encampment of the local national guard outfit will be at Camp Sparta, this year, not Camp Douglas as stated Saturday, it is announced by Captain Chester Sevenance. All artillery units from Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Illinois, will camp at Sparta, while the infantry will use Camp Douglas as in the past.

Officer Tom Foley Is Back on Duties Again

Officer Tom Foley, who was wounded in the left leg two weeks ago last Thursday night in a gun battle with a burglar, who was slain, returned to his duties on the local force Sunday evening. The officer stated that he was pleased to get back on the job once again and that his wound was healing in excellent shape.

No further word has been received by police officials as to the identity of the burglar who was killed by Officer Foley. The body, which was shipped to Knoxville, Iowa, under the supposition that the slain man was Carl H. Brooks of that place, is still being held by authorities of that place.

SHINN-DIBBLE

The Congregational parsonage at Kenosha was the scene of a pretty wedding ceremony Thursday afternoon of last week when Miss Mabel Le Ferne Shinn of Wisconsin Rapids became the bride of Lester Eugene Dibble of Antioch, Ill. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Cady.

The bride wore a tan dress, with hat and slippers to match, and a corsage bouquet. Her sister, Eva May Shinn was maid of honor, wearing a henna dress, with a corsage of roses and sweet peas. Earl Dibble attended the bridegroom. A wedding supper was served at Milwaukee for the wedding party, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dibble left for a week's trip through northern Wisconsin.

They will make their home after July 15, on Huron street, Kenosha.

Observe Wedding Anniversaries At Reception, Dance

The silver anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac P. Witter, and that of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Gibson, was made the occasion of a very attractive social affair on Saturday evening when 175 guests were entertained at a reception and dance at the Witter home, Shadow Lawn.

Engagement Announced

The event was also the occasion of the announcement of the betrothal of Mr. and Mrs. Witter's son, Jere D., to Miss Suzanne Gobel, daughter of Mrs. Julia P. Gobel, of Chicago. The house was beautifully decorated with many bouquets of roses, each room being graced with jars and baskets of the fragrant blossoms. The dining room was especially attractive in the color scheme of pink and silver. The ball room made a pretty setting for the dancers with decorations of green and silver. Music was furnished for the dance by Benson's orchestra of Chicago.

In the receiving line were: Mr. and Mrs. Witter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gibson, Jere D. Witter, Miss Suzanne Gobel, Mrs. Julia P. Gobel, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Berkey and Mrs. E. L. Watrous.

Mrs. Watrous acted as bridesmaid for Mrs. Witter at the wedding in Des Moines, Iowa, twenty-five years ago and Mr. Nelson attended Mr. Witter as best man. Mr. Berkey was an usher at the wedding.

During the evening the guests enjoyed two piano solos given by Miss Gobel, who is a pianist of marked ability. Vocal solos by Miss Helen Sturtevant, of Wausau, also added to the evening's delightful entertainment.

Assisting during the evening, were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James W Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald M. MacKinnon, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Taylor and Mrs. B. K. Reeves

LEGISLATIVE RECORD

The sigh of relief, which by tradition accompanies the adjournment of the legislature, may this year be something of a sigh of satisfaction that so much of a constructive and worth while nature was done and so little, comparatively, of a destructive or harmful nature.

The legislature, in our opinion, deserves praise for the following important pieces of work:

Voted increased appropriations for university, normal schools, and charitable institutions.

Adopted gasoline tax and new highway appropriation measure.

Voted interim investigations of questions of taxation and departmental consolidation.

Voted interim investigation of forestry problem.

Banned use of dairy products in butter substitutes.

Defeated proposal for cigaret tax.

Defeated three separate attempts by Governor Blaine to gain control of state highway commission.

Ratified child labor amendment.

Adopted memorial to congress urging Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway.

And here is our list of the important things done which are distinctly unpraiseworthy:

Adopted administration tax measure increasing sum to be raised by taxation of incomes, repealing personal property offset and giving state larger proportion of money raised by taxation of incomes.

Defeated proposal for consolidation of bureaus and commissions.

Refused important increase in funds for eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

Refused to forbid or censor dual job-holding by members of the legislature.

Whether the legislature was right in rejecting the Smith insurance code measure, and in adopting the Garey old age pension plan, we are uncertain. We are inclined to think that the defeat of the insurance bill was a good thing, chiefly for the reason that no one seemed to know exactly what it would do. As for the old age pension measure, that is an experiment that will have to be judged by its results.

The governor's veto thwarted the legislative will in two important matters, as well as in a number of others of lesser importance. First in order is the conservation measure. Its veto, however, was followed by legislative rejection of the administration substitute, and the adoption of a compromise which we think will prove the best conservation bill the state has had for a number of years.

Likewise the proposal to place banks upon an income tax basis was adopted by the legislature, but met with executive veto.

WILL ROGERS ON MEXICO

"Getting killed in Mexico is cheaper than insurance," says Will Rogers, whose once-a-week column of comment on current topics is the next best thing to attending the Follies. Will's specialty is swinging a rope but he'd rather do no discredit to a seat in the cabinet.

Here are a few of his remarks on the recent exchange of words between Secretary Kellogg and President Calles of Mexico:

"If an American is killed in Mexico we send them a note saying: 'The murderer must be punished within 24 hours and $100,000 must be paid at once to his relatives.' Now, maybe this guy wasn't worth alive over 10 cents, and couldn't return to America without being hung, but we must protect American rights. Now, suppose, on the other hand, a Californian is killed in New York city. Why they will never in 100 years find out even who killed him, much less punish him. Getting killed in Mexico is cheaper than having insurance."

Apparently we in America, like the people of medieval times, have to look to the court fool for common sense. Will Rogers is America's court fool, and his wisdom, illuminated by wit, is in happy contrast to the stupidity, hidden beneath dignity, that is all too frequent in officialdom.

When the President Takes a Vacation

(Christian Science Monitor)

Back almost within the shadow of the historic State House where he served the Commonwealth of Massachusetts successively as legislator, Lieutenant-Governor and Governor, President Coolidge has pitched his tent, metaphorically, to enjoy the ocean breezes during the period of his summer vacation. One wonders how the Chief Magistrate of a nation of more than 100,000,000 people goes about it to play at all. But the inclination is to believe that Calvin Coolidge plays much as he works—intensively and whole-heartedly.

However, to one reared in the unrestricted freedom of New England's mountain and forest country, with unmeasured leagues and miles of hills and valleys as his playground, there must come a feeling of restraint when he finds himself constantly under the observation of friendly guardians, when every passer-by is prepared to level a camera to catch a characteristic movement or gesture, and when, even in repose, he is aware that the thoughts of millions, kindly or critical, are directed toward him.

And so it might be agreed among those who in imagination are able to put themselves in the place of the President that the generous and considerate thing would be to leave the distinguished vacationist to himself except upon those occasions when he chooses to participate in public events. He has worked industriously to so shape the affairs of the people whom he serves that this respite from the daily routine is possible for a few brief weeks. He has earned the consideration which a thoughtful public should be glad to accord.

American democracy, after all, seems to be a quite tangible and actual state of consciousness. The summer home of the President is far less pretentious than those of thousands of others. Nowhere could there be found a grander or more inspiring view than that of the sea from its windows and verandas. But that is something which all may share. It is a simple but commodious house, lacking in every detail the gorgeousness and ornate beauty of the residences which fancy selects as the abiding places of those who are called the rulers of men. Yet it is stanch and stable, and firmly anchored to the granite foundation upon which it stands. Its prototype is found in its temporary master. He, too, is of New England, as immovable from the course which he has marked out as the mountains and hills from which he gained youthful inspiration. Such a man can find rest, even in purposeful activity in the surroundings which seem to speak his language and echo his thoughts.

A Call for Senator Walsh

(Milwaukee Journal)

When Senator Walsh discovered Albert Bacon Fall's sudden affluence after signing away the public's oil lands, he kept after the matter. Going to Florida, he tangled up witnesses so badly that E. L. Doheny had to come clean with his story about the little black satchel with $100,000 in cash in it. Mr. Walsh had all kinds of opposition—opposition from administration circles that were trying to keep the thing hidden, opposition from certain administration senators on the investigation committee itself. But his accumulation of evidence was so convincing that Judge McCormick has ordered Doheny to surrender the public's land in California.

We were told, however, that this was not the proper way to go about such things. President Coolidge knew the way to do it. If the investigation was only taken away from Senator Walsh, the president would name attorneys who would see the matter through in the orderly processes of the courts. We would get all the facts. This was promised. Government attorneys say that they traced Liberty bonds from Sinclair interests to Albert Fall. But they let their witnesses get away, and not a line of evidence to sustain their allegations got into the record. If President Coolidge's attorneys are right about the Liberty bonds, they have bungled the job. Judge Kennedy has told Sinclair to keep the oil-lands in Wyoming.

The evidence that Senator Walsh turned up in his investigation won back the public lands that Doheny got. The president's way of going at it got no results. But Doheny and Sinclair are yet to be tried on criminal indictments. It is suggested that another senate committee be named, with Senator Walsh at its head, to find out the truth about this alleged gift of Liberty bonds, and that the president be spared responsibility for results. Somehow we have an idea that Senator Walsh would get to the bottom of it all—even though he had to go to Africa to cross examine gentlemen who suddenly decide that they must hunt lions when they are needed in court.

Greater Than Riches

(Sheboygan Press)

Senator La Follette left an estate of approximately $10,000, the sum total of a life's work. Most men in public life have acquired greater wealth, but it must be borne in mind that Senator La Follette did not allow his name to be identified with any money-making scheme, and was engaged in a fight in which the money interests were on the other side. All during his public career he fought what he believed was the system, and this meant that the money interests were against him.

The estate includes Maple Bluff farm, with a mortgage of $20,000, and insurance and personal property of $20,800. It was never the desire of Senator La Follette to acquire wealth, and even in the late winter when he was given an opportunity to lend his voice to a Florida land proposition in order to influence Wisconsin people to invest there, he replied that he had kept his name free from taint all these years and that he was not going to take a chance so late in life.

Whether you agreed with Senator La Follette or not, there was so much will-power and courage wrapped up in his frame that you could not help but feel the sincerity of the man.

In many of his addresses he spoke of wealth and influence and declared that if he could depart this world leaving behind a record of worth-while deeds, it would mean more to his family than great riches.

Listen here, grown-ups, I'll give you a tip that will help you cut age feeling short. Youth will return if you'll just take a trip to a peppy amusement resort.

Out where the thrill and the fun's runnin' high and the thought of all work's on the shelf. That is the place you too often pass by and you really are creatin' yourself.

Shootin' the chutes makes you tingle with zip, through the speed and the splash that you get. Jiggles and jerks from the ride on the Whap jar you loose from your worry and fret.

Pleasure is there and can easily be found when the grown-ups, like kids, take a fling at riding a horse on the merry-go-round and flying the aerial swing.

No matter how old, you would like to be young. Well, hie to the joy park and then—soon you will know why the praises are sung of the spot where we're all young again.

The FLAPPER WIFE

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children.

She refuses pointblank to do her own housework, and hires a maid. But Dick has to let the maid go, because he can't afford her wage. Gloria has swamped him with debt for her clothes and a new automobile.

She becomes infatuated with an out-of-work actor. When he leaves town to go to New York she follows him. But he spurns her. Then she tries to find a job as a chorus-girl but fails. It is only then that Gloria begins to realize how much she cares for Dick. She is terribly lonely for him. But she is afraid to go home.

At last, however, she does. Dick takes her back, but not as his wife. Gloria begins to wonder if he is in love with his secretary, Susan Briggs. While Dick is out very late one night the house is robbed. Gloria feels sure Dick spent the evening with Miss Briggs. But next morning she learns that Dick was at the home of Dr. John Seymour, who had killed himself because of his wife's love affair with Jim Carewe.

Gloria goes to Dick's office to tell him about the burglary, but he is not there. She has a long talk with Miss Briggs and wrings from her a confession that she is in love with Dick.

Gloria tells Dick that night that he will have to discharge Miss Briggs. He refuses. And Gloria accuses him of being in love with Miss Briggs.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Dick frowned. His eyes looked straight ahead of him under their bent brows.

"No, I'm not 'crazy'—as you call it—about any woman," he said deliberately. He walked to the open window and stood, with folded arms, looking into the fragrant darkness beyond.

"When you say that do you mean me, too?" Gloria asked. There was an agony of entreaty in her voice. "Do you mean that you don't care about me any more?"

Dick turned slowly toward her, without answering. The movement brought him face to face with her.

She looked at him narrowly, at first only with curiosity; then with a kind of terror . . . His eyes were cold and without light.

Gloria felt as if some curtain had dropped between them . . . a curtain that she could not pierce.

She stepped back and put up her hand in a little defensive movement. "You don't love me any more?" . . . She answered her own question.

And then she burst into hysterical tears. Through her eyelashes, gathered into little wet points, she could see Dick looking at her curiously, as if he had never seen her before.

She watched him drop into his chair and pick up a book. He set it down between them, like a barrier, and began to read.

. . . The clock in the hall struck eleven . . . and, as if the sound had freed some blocked movement in Gloria's mind, she pulled herself together and went upstairs.

As she went she heard Dick strike a match, for his cold pipe. He was calmly settling down to a quiet evening . . . No doubt he was glad she was gone!

* * *

"I will get back!" Gloria said fiercely to herself the next morning when she awoke. She had set her alarm clock for seven!

"I will get back into Dick's life! I belong there. He can't put me out of it!"

She bathed, and dressed herself in one of the bungalow aprons that Rangold had worn for her morning work. Then she tiptoed downstairs and brought in the milk and the paper from the back porch.

She lighted the gas stove and took the coffee tin from the kitchen cupboard. She stood looking at it helplessly. How did you make coffee?

There were no directions on the gay wrappr around the tin, and Gloria didn't own a cook book.

Then suddenly she remembered that Dick knew how to make coffee. She would run upstairs and ask him how it was done.

She knocked on his door. "Dick . . . I've brought you the morning paper," she called, brightly.

In a moment Dick opened the door.

"Thanks." His eyes took her in—the bungalow apron, the rolled-up sleeves, and the coffee tin in her hand.

"What do you think you're doing?" he asked. An amused smile flickered over his face.

"Making coffee for my husband!" Gloria answered pertly. "Only I don't know how to make it. Aside from that I'm getting along fine!"

"Dick's smile broadened into a grin. "I suppose you're after my recipe," he said. "Take a tablespoon of coffee for each cup, and an extra one for the pot."

"No, I'm not 'crazy'—as you call it—about any woman," he said deliberately.

* * *

Gloria's spirit bitten at his good humor. And something in her breast that had been like a lump of ice, seemed to melt. . . . She was sure that he hadn't meant his harshness to her last night. He hadn't meant what he had said . . .

She put up her lips for him to kiss. "You aren't peeved at you, Glory, are you?" she asked. She laid her hand on his cheek, and came a step nearer.

Then, with a little sigh, she put her head down on his shoulder. It was good to be there with Dick, friends once more. Like the solution of a problem.

"We've quarreled long enough . . . you and I. Kiss me!" she said.

But as she spoke, she knew she was making a mistake. She could feel Dick draw away from her.

Her hands dropped at her sides, and she went downstairs without another word.

She made the coffee, according to Dick's campfire recipe, and put it on the stove to boil.

When he came downstairs to breakfast, it was more than ready.

"I'm sorry there isn't toast," Gloria said as she poured it for him, "but there wasn't so much as a crumb of bread in the house. I'll stock up today."

She tried to drink a cup of her coffee. But she had to admit to herself that it was too bitter to drink. She didn't dare to offer Dick a second cup of it.

"Will you be home tonight for dinner?" she asked as he got up from the table.

She hoped that he would at least offer to kiss her goodby. But he didn't.

"Yes, I'll be home," he said coldly. "I think I'll take your car today. You don't seem to drive it any more . . . do you mind if I do?"

Gloria shook her head. There was a lump in her throat. She watched Dick drive down the street, her vision blurred with tears. She wiped them away, angrily.

"What's the matter with me?" she asked herself. "Am I falling in love with the poor sap?"

Was she? . . . Or had she always been in love with him? And had it taken her jealousy of Miss Briggs to unveil the fact to her? . . .

* * *

The thought of Miss Briggs down in Dick's office with him all day was a torment to her. She stopped in the middle of her work a dozen times that morning to wish that Dick had a man secretary instead of Susan Briggs.

"He's just got to fire her!" she kept telling herself. "I just won't have her down in that office with him. That's all there is to it!"

Soothing and sympathetic, was she? Well; Gloria would show Dick that she, herself, could be soothing and sympathetic. If that was Miss Briggs' method of "vamping" Dick, that would be Gloria's game. Two could play at any old game . . .

The sight of Dick's shabby old house-coat hanging in his closet was an inspiration to Gloria. She would buy him a new one. Goodness knew he needed it!

And it wouldn't be a dull gray one like this . . . It would have some pep and dash about it . . .

* * *

When Dick came home that night, the table was neatly set. There was an appetizing odor of frying steak in the house. And Gloria, in a clean white dress, came out of the kitchen to meet him.

"Dinner will be ready in two minutes," she greeted him cheerfully. "And when you go upstairs to wash your hands, take a peek at the surprise I have for you up there."

On the bed in Dick's room was spread Gloria's "surprise" . . . a purple silk house-coat lined with scarlet.

"Holy suffering cats!" Dick said to himself. "Does she think I'd wear a thing like that!"

He went down to dinner in his suit. Gloria's face fell when she saw him.

"Aren't you going to put on your new housecoat?" she asked.

Dick shook his head. "You know I never wear bright colors like that, Gloria," he said, "although it is a doggoned nice coat. Thanks."

"What'll I do with it?" Gloria asked pathetically. She looked as if she were going to cry. "Take it back?"

"You didn't pay cash for it, did you?" Dick asked.

"N—no," Gloria faltered. "I charged it to you."

"And how much was it?" Dick's voice had grown stern.

"Not very much . . . only $50," Gloria replied. "It really was a bargain. It had been $75 . . . awfully good silk in it."

Dick sat down at the dining room table.

"Now look here, Gloria," he said. "I've told you a dozen times that you're not to go downtown and run up bills without asking me about it first . . . And in spite of it, you charge a $50 house-coat to me in a store where I owe money as it it!"

Gloria felt a frown growing between her eyebrows.

"Well, what do you want me to do . . . take the thing back?" she asked. "I'm going to be terribly ashamed if I have to, let me tell you!"

"I'll take it back," Dick answered. "Just do it up in a bundle, and I'll take it with me in the car tomorrow morning . . . I hate to seem ungrateful, Glory, but a $50 present that isn't paid for wouldn't give me any satisfaction, at all. I'd have the blues every time I put it on."

Gloria shook her head. "I can't understand you at all, Dick," she said. "Suppose you do owe a few bills? Everybody does. Nobody ever has every dollar paid righ up on the first dot, on the tablecloth with the tines of the month."

Dick was silent. He made little of his fork.

"I . . . I suppose you'll have a fit if I mention the word 'clothes' to you," Gloria went on, after a minute, "but I haven't a single summer dress. You know you promised me I could have some, before you went away on your trip. Remember?"

"Yes," Dick answered quietly. "But don't you think it's more important for us to get some of our old bills paid off, first?"

"No!" Gloria cried, angrily. "I'm just about at the point where I could go to jail for debt, cheerfully, like Mr. Micawber. That is, if I could have a few clothes . . . . I'm in rags!"

Dick's lip curled. "Pretty costly rags, I'll say," he remarked. "You bought three $100 dresses just a few weeks ago. I'll bet my mother never had one dress in all her life that cost that much. And Dad could buy and sell me a dozen times over . . ."

"It's just terrible that you have to support a wife, isn't it?" Gloria asked with fine sarcasm. "I feel sorry for you!"

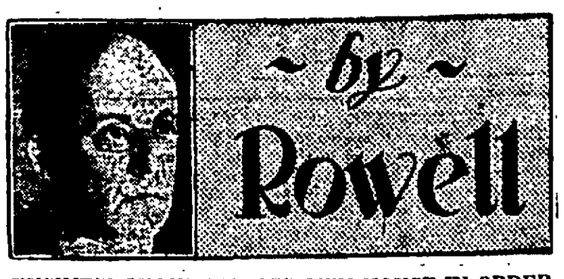
"You should!" Dick answered. "All I hope is that you'll feel so sorry for me that you won't buy any more $50 hats for a while."

Gloria moved irritably under his angry gaze. "You think of every penny . . . " she said.

"I've got to think of every penny!" Dick answered. "And you must, too, for a while, until I get on my feet again. That sickness of mine knocked everything in the head . . . . . There's just one way of looking at this thing. Our marriage has become nothing but a business partnership—and a one-sided one at that."

"Oh, is that so!" Gloria cried. "So that's the way you've come to feel about it . . . Well, thanks, I don't care for any! If that's all I mean to you, I'm through! See? All through!"

(To Be Continued)



BUSINESS MIGHT PUT ITS OWN HOUSE IN ORDER

It is a good thing for the Association of Credit Men to consider means of stopping crimes against business costing a quarter of a billion a year.

But there are also crimes by business, costing many billions.

Business has its quacks, as well as the professions.

Fraudulent stock salesmen, high-pressure promoters of wildcat speculation, sellers of quack medicine and quack psychology, boosters of bogus goods—these, by their crimes in the name of "business", are as much enemies of legitimate business as are any of the criminals "against" business.

Real business does not harvest the "sucker" crop.

It should join with the rest of us in hounding down the pretended business which does.

They know how to do it in Cuba. Two editors call each other pigs, dogs, thieves, liars, and other journalistic ephithets, and then suddenly announce that the "differences" have been settled.

It is added that one or both have been injured "examining" sabers.

The law forbids dueling, so the wounds are always accidental, incident to the inspecting the weapons.

America is not the only place where the delusion prevails that a crime is not a crime if you call it by some other name.

Why "Average Ages" Are Confusing

The chance of surviving infancy and growing up is greater, but not the chance of reaching old age if you do grow up.

"Average" is deceptive. The average age of a family of whom two are twenty-three and twenty-five years old, and two died in infancy, is twelve years, though the only actual members are twice that age.

The earlier generations showed a much larger number of little graves, but nearly as large a proportion of gray heads.

The chances of living are better, but not the chances of living long.

Our Physicians Aren't Groping in the Dark

Dr. Carrell, of the Rockefeller Institute, says there are two sorts of things the doctors know—those they know scientifically and those they have learned, cetain pratcical things, about by experience.

Since medicine is a practical art, and has to deal with the sick as they come, its practitioners have to do the very best they can, even in those conditions of which their knowledge is not yet scientific.

But do not jump at the conclusion that no medical knowledge is scientific because some of it is not.

And do not suppose that the "empirical" party is rule of thumb guess work.

Physicians know which part is scientific. And they are groping by no means in the total dark on the other part.

It was known practically, by millions of experiences, that quinine was good for malaria, long before the present scientific knowledge was developed to show why it is good for it.

Everybody has known for ages that sunshine is good for children, but it is only in the past half-dozen years that anybody knew why.

Knowledge is "empirical" if you know, by experience, that a certain treatment works. It is scientific if you know why and how.

Prohibition Helped Him, After All

"Prohibition is ruining me," said a famous restaurant keeper, closing his jazz palace to escape bankruptcy.

Then it occurred to him that there might, after all, be money in selling real food, to people who wanted to eat it.

So he started coffee houses, box lunches, and all sorts of ways of feeding hungry people at reasonable prices.

Now he buys a movie magnate's million-dollar home. Prohibition paid, after all.

It took drink to sell a quarter's worth of food and a dime's worth of jazz for four dollars.

But real food, like any other real commodity, sold to people who want it, is better business.

Lumber Men to Aid Hoover War On Industrial Waste

Washington—General use of short length lumber, nine feet or less, will save enough forest material, now wasted, to build 300,000 eight-room dwellings annually, according to Arthur T. Upson, lumber technologist of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. The association has set up that objective as a part of its contribution to the crusade on industrial waste being waged by Herbert Hoover.

Data gathered by the association, the United States forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., and the lumber division of the department of Commerce now are in the hands of a committee which is considering how to stimulate the public demand for short lengths, which are said to be cheaper and, usually, of better quality than long lumber.

Mr. Upson said the short-length economy proposed is equivalent in forest conservation to giving the 20,000 lumber mills of the United States an entire year's holiday every tenth year, or about 38,000,000,000 feet of lumber, which would require all the saw timber on 380,000 acres of land.

Punk's Bunk

While out on a tour the other evening we quite by accident drove past the family home that houses among other occupants and things—Mike Ezekiel—bunk kolyum hero.

* * *

When it was stated that we drove by Mike's abode quite by accident we want to clarify the point by stating that anybody who drives out in Mike's territory must do it by accident—nobody would do that while in possession of all his faculties.

While passing the house we hollered at a man standing out in the corn field, but could get no answer.

Could it be that Mike had forgotten us already, we asked?

Seeing our gang in the field Mike let drive with his civil war relic and warmed our exterior with hot salt.

Realizing his mistake he begged our apologies and stated that his dog had a keen sense of smell and had mistaken the boys for some Old Crow.

* * *

Yes, the dog has a wonderfully efficient nose.

* * *

We complimented Mike upon his scarecrow, saying that it was the most realistic work of art that we have yet noticed.

* * *

A few minutes later Mike told us the history of the scarecrow and among other things stated that it was the most efficient scarecrow that he had ever used. Scares crows into the next county, he explained.

"Just the other day," Mike said, "I saw a flock of Portage county crows bringing back some corn that they had stolen from my dad ten years ago."

White Sox Win Seventh Straight; Champs Gain

COLLINS' MEN SWEEP SERIES WITH INDIANS

Chicago.—Chicago made a clean sweep of the series with Cleveland Sunday by winning the final game, 8 to 4, and running their winning streak to seven games. The locals bunched their hits for their scores. Thurston pitched good ball in the pinches, the visitors being able to count off him in three innings.

Washington.—Reuther held the Philadelphia batters in check at all stages Sunday and the Senators won, 6 to 1, giving them the edge in the three games thus far played of the important series between the league leaders and the close-pressing champions. McNeely, center fielder, accounted for five of Washington's runs, scoring three himself and driving in two more. Lamar drove out a hit to bring his string of consecutive hitting games to 28.

Detroit.—Detroit's winning streak of nine games ended here Sunday when St. Louis romped away with the final game of the series, 8 to 2. Hargrave's home run in the eighth with two on base gave the visitors a safe lead. Two costly errors gave the Tigers their only scores, although one fumble went for a hit when Lamotte and McManus collided at second to miss Haney's pop fly.

New York.—The Giants retained their slim hold on first place in the National league by defeating the Boston Braves Sunday, 6 to 5, Meusel's triple with Kelly on base in the eighth deciding the game. Young's circuit drive with two on the sacks tied the score at 5-all in the seventh.

St. Louis.—Bolstered by stellar pitching and timely hitting the Cardinals bagged a doubleheader with the Cubs before an audience of 22,000 Sunday. The first game was won, 3 to 1, when Jess Haines tossed only three hits. A circuit clout by Jim Bottomley with the bases full in the fifth inning accounted for half of the Cardinals' runs in the second game. The score was 8 to 3. Ray Blades also got a homer in the closing contest. No one was on base. Cooper was pitching.

Cincinnati.—Three Cincinnati pitchers failed to stop Pittsburgh Sunday, the Pirates winning, 5 to 2. Yde kept the Reds' hits well scattered, except in one inning when the home team scored two runs. Carey's home run over the left field fence in the seventh was one of the longest drives ever seen here.

Milwaukee.—The Brewers finally won a ball game after eight successive kicks in the ribs. They conquered the Kels here Sunday through the efforts of Herman Bell, who earned the right to a 4 to 3 edge in the opening half of a double menu. But they fell into the rut in the second attempt which went to the Kels, 6 to 1.

St. Paul.—Kansas City won a slow and uninteresting game from St. Paul, 6 to 5, in the first half of a scheduled doubleheader. The second contest was called in the fourth on account of 6 o'clock law. Three Kansas City pitchers issued 11 bases on balls but the Staints were unable to profit thereby.

Columbus.—Indianapolis and Columbus broke even Sunday before the largest crowd since opening day. Columbus won the first game, 4 to 3, Palmero outpitching Schemanske. Indianapolis won the second, 5 to 4, in 10 innings. This was also a pitchers' battle in which Maun was more steady than Foulk.

Toledo.— Louisville won its tenth straight game and increased its record of victories to 26 out of the last 28 games played by taking both games of a doubleheader from Toledo Sunday. The scores were 7 to 5 and 10 to 5. Hills, Toledo third baseman, was badly spiked in a play at third in the first game and required medical attention on the field before he could be relieved.

Any Ice Today, Madame?

"Red" Grange, the Iceman

Wheaton, Ill., June 29—To the customers along his route here he is just "Harold, that awfully nice college chap."

To the same customers, Harold (Red) Grange delivers some eight tons of ice daily and more when the weather is hot.

His name is in the gridiron hall of fame.

Football never saw a more spectacular player than Grange.

Last season he won undying renown for both himself and his alma mater, Illinois, by the feats he pulled and the touchdowns scored by his daring.

The accompanying photo explains how he gets that way.

"Tote ice and you can knock a house down," says "Red."

"I'm up at 5:30 every morning and on the job until 5 at night. After that I turn in.

"Like the job? You bet. Gives me a good chance to study people. We have a lot of good ones on our route. But we have crabs, too. The crabs crab and the good ones look pleasant. But I like it."

Reformers To Watch Greb And Weinert July Second

BY JOE WILLIAMS

New York, June 29—Charlie Weinert fights Harry Wills here July 2. On the same card Harry Greb risks his middleweight title to a decision against Mickey Walker.

The reform element of the country will watch the outcome of these bouts with passionate interest.

Weinert used to be one of the gay dogs of the ring. A year or so ago he accepted the terrible consequences of a comlete reformation, inspired by the philosophy that it is never too late to prepare for a halo.

Greb Steps High

Greb moved on to take Weinert's place as the perpetual midnight thrill in the white districts of the land, operating on the notion that if life is worth living at all it is worth living riotously and robustly.

Billy McCarney is the present manager of Weinert, and Billy thinks his man will outpoint Wills. Billy tells you Weinert was never as gay as he was painted and for that reason is still much better physically than most people think.

"Weinert used to drink and step around and all that," admits McCarney, "but he was not half as bad as he pretended."

Liked the Gay Life

Weinert, according to his new manager, delighted to pose as a gay boulevardier and a bibulous man about town. When he opened a bottle of wine he wanted the world to hear the cork pop, when he stepped out he wanted the world to line up along the curb and watch him strut.

"It was things like that that gave Weinert the reputation he has," says McCarney. This is at least a new slant on the Newark Adonis. It may be true.

Greb seems to have no such campaign, and his widely established reputation as king of the dance halls and monarch of the mammas rides by unassailed.

This early to bed and up with the milkman stuff is just as much cold porridge to the middleweight champion, and besides there are so many points of civic and cultural interest to see after the midnight bells have tolled.

Greb is Physical Marvel

Greb is the physical marvel of his time. Rarely ever in training, yet he always operates at top speed and is seldom on the losing end.

Last fall he was matched with Tiger Folwers at Fremont, O. The footie world admitted this match would test the champion's skill to the utmost. A few predicted the hard hitting negro would knock him out.

No one was less disturbed at the prospects of defeat than Greb. Instead of training he went "partying." Even the promoters were alarmed. They weren't quite sure he'd be there for the battle. But he was and Flowers did little against him.

It's hard to figure a freak like Greb. By all the laws of nature and the ring he should have been knocked over long before this. Maybe Walker will do it in July. And again maybe he won't.

ST. LAWRENCE CLUB LOSES TO POINT INVADERS

Holding the Soo Lines of Stevens Point to a measly three hits, Art Plahmer, one-time ace of Wisconsin boxmen, lost a heart-breaking game to the invaders here Sunday afternoon by a score of 3 to 2. Plahmer was pitching for the St. Lawrence club team of this city.

Besides only allowing three hits Art struck out 6 and gave 3 bases on balls. At the plate he was a demon, driving out three hits, one a double.

The Soo Lines scored first in their half of the sixth, but the club came back in its half and evened the count. The invaders scored again in the seventh and in the ninth. With the count 3-1 against them the club rallied and scored one run, but could not push the tieing or winning markers across the home station. Langenberg, Soo Line twirler, was touched for 10 hits, but struck out 12, being exceptionally stingy with his hits in the tight places.

The box score:

JACK SCOTT KEEPS UP WINNING PAGE

Old Jack Scott of the Giants still continues to hurl winning ball. He's been one of the most dependable pitchers on the McGraw staff thus far this season. And Scott, it will be remembered, was figured all through a few years ago.

Sammy Gray Gives Thomas Credit For His Success

Philadelphia, June 28—Sitting on the sidelines, Sammy Gray, Mack's maimed and famed pitcher, has had plenty of chance to ponder over his sudden rise in baseball.

Four years ago Sammy was making his debut in the sticks of Texas. Today he is the only big league pitcher with a perfect record, having won eight straight games before suffering a broken thumb.

"I doubtless owe my rapid rise to Ira Thomas," said Gray, as he sat in the stands at Sibbe park. "While I was with Fort Worth and Ira had the Shreveport club he took a fancy to my pitching and told Connie about me.

"Although Detroit and Cleveland both had a chance to get me. In fact, I was with the Tigers a short time and was owned by Cleveland. I drifted back into the Texas league and the Athletics finally drafted me.

"I actually believe I surprised Connie Mack. Hundreds of other pitchers have been recommended to him in recent years and few showed any real big league form.

"My 1924 campaign with the Athletics was not very brilliant, but I obtained a lot of valuable experience on the bench and the times I went in as relief pitcher.

"Frequently I have been asked if I get nervous when appearing before big crowd. The fans never bother me. In fact, when I broke in last summer at the Yankees' stadium there were 50,000 persons looking me over, but I didn't know they were there. I might just as well have been pitching down in Texas.

"I tried my best then and always work hard when called upon. I learned one thing early. It never pays to ease up in the big league. I believe that's the way good pitchers loose their effectiveness, when they start to get careless."

Gray is only 25 years old and should turn in a raft of victories for Mack in the next few seasons.

Billy Evans Says

PITCHING CYCLES

Pitching in the major leagues runs in cycles.

When I broke into the American League 20 years ago, pitchers using a fast high ball almost exclusively were the stars.

Cy Young, Rube Waddell, Walter Johnson, Fred Glade and other outstanding pitchers depending almost entirely on the effectiveness of the fast high one.

Recently there has been a run on low ball pitching, inter-persed with much freak stuff, the knuckle ball predommating.

Bill Dinneen, now an American League umpire, in his day one of the games greatest pitchers, is looking for a revival of the high fast ball.

"I am sure any pitcher with a good fast one, pitched shoulder or better high, could win consistently in the majors. The novelty of the thing, if nothing else, would get him by," says Dineen.

* * *

Dineen says that more high flies result against high ball pitching; that it is far more difficult to properly time then the ball pitched between the knee and the waist line.

SCARCITY OF CLASS

For several years the class of baseball has suffered because of the lack of likely material enlisted from the minors.

Players capable of stepping into the shoes of fading stars like Cobb, Speaker, Collins, Johnson and the rest are few and far between.

As a matter of fact, these same players having started from 15 to 20 years, are still just about the best at their respective positions.

Looking over the ring material, it looks as if there was just as great a scarcity of good fighters as ball players.

Several of the present day champions are far removed from the standard of the fighters who for years have held championships.

It must be funny for Benny Leonard to size up the two boys who have survived the lightweight elimination tourney in New York.

Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo and Stanislaus Loayza of Chile are shortly to swap punches to determine who shall officially be regarded as Leonard's successor.

The lack of real material in the lightweight division is typical of the condition in the feather and light heavyweight classes.

* * *

No doubt some of the champions of 20 years ago, as well as contenders for the titles, would like nothing better than a new lease on life. Pretty soft for them.

JOE WOOD AT YALE

Had a chat with Joe Wood the other day. Baseball fans will recall Wood as one of the game's greatest right-handed pitchers.

Wood is now head baseball coach at Yale. He had his club watching the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians in a game at New York, just prior to meeting Princeton.

If Joe hoped that his proteges would profit as a result of seeing the big leaguers in action, he was doomed to disappointment.

As is often the case, the major leaguers had an off day and pulled several plays that would have caused the collegians to blush had they done the same.

* * *

Wood is sold on his new job. He hopes to spend the remainder of his baseball days at Yale. He is very popular with the collegians and has been blessed with much success.

 You can't imagine how provoking this is to a bunch of jolly boys looking for a wild time over the week end. **

Benny Leonard has changed his mind and will fight again. . . . Thus the "I-love-Mammy-Best-of-all-championship" goes by default.

New York to Send Strong Team West

New York, June 29—The New York Athletic club will invade the Pacific Coast next month with one of the largest track and field teams that ever wore the winged foot emblem in a national championship, if present plans do not go astray. Active preparations are now going on and over forty athletes are in training for the highest honors in amateur athletic union competition. With this field now being prepared which consists of the strongest aggregation of talent in the east, it looks as if the mercury footers will capture the national track and field championships of the United States after the smoke of the battle dies on July 3, 4, and 5.

A fair line on the talent that the New York Athletic club will send to the coast was had at the games held at Travers Island recently, when practically all the men were entered. The sprinters out were: S. W. Deck, Francis Hussey, J. O. McDonald, Jackson V. Sholz and George L. Mittlersdorf. The quarter mile runners were: J. P. Tierney, J. O. McDonald, Edwin Swinburn and Allen Woodring. For the mile run: William Goodwin and J. J. Connolly competed. The 220-yard Francis Hussey, J. O. McDonald, Jackson V. Sholz and George L. Mittelsdorf.

Tiger-Yank Game Will Live Long In Memory

New York, June 29—That sixth inning of the game played here the other day between the Yankees and Tygers was on of the most unusual to crop out in the majors in some time.

The Tygers, in scoring 13 runs to tie the season record, batted around twice, getting six hits, seven bases on balls, a sacrifice fly and being further aided by two errors.

Of the 13 runs, 11 were scored before a man was retired, believed to be a record. The entire allotment came with only one out, Wingo and Cobb lifting high flies in succession to end the spree.

The half inning took 59 minutes to play with Cobb's home run with the bases loaded featuring.

Oddly enough, it was Babe Ruth who retired the side, getting all three putouts on long flies.

State Baseball

Oshkosh—Handy's single over second base scored Arndt and Keith Sunday, breaking a 11 inning 1 to 1 deadlock between the Oshkosh Kitz-Pfel team and Mayville, the latter winning, 2 to 1. An error paved the way for the winning markers. Lesolyn, for Oshkosh, allowed seven hits. He struck out three men in the eleventh inning. A crowd of 2,500 attended the game.

Kenosha—Norman Pfitt's brilliant pitching, fielding and batting were outstanding factors in Kenosha's win, 7 to 0, Wisconsin State league win over the Beloit Fairmens here Sunday before a capacity crowd. Not a Beloit man reached second base. Pfitt's single in the seventh accounted for the two of the runs. He kept five hits scattered and was invincible all the way.

Tom Phillips gave six hits, but in the seventh he blew up when the Kenosha nine scored the contest. As a result of the win the locals divided the weekend series with Beloit and met a tie the league leadership margin to two full game.

Wausau—After trailing for six innings, the local Lumberjacks rallied and scored five runs to win from Mosinee, 9 to 8. Five home runs were made. Saturday Tomahawk won a slugfest from the Lumberjacks, 11 to 10, in which the visitors made four home run.

Merrill.—By a 2 to 0 score Merrill defeated Rhinelander here Sunday with Rube Noble pitching effectively to allow only five scattered hits. He fanned 11. Rhinelander used two pitchers, Johnson replacing Donovan in the ninth. Merrill's winning points were made in the fourth on two hits, a sacrifice and an error. Eddie Stump, who was injured Saturday, was replaced in this game by Ulrich of Wausau, who played good ball.

Sheboygan.—Strong's sensational stop of Heilberger's hard hit back of first base stopped a ninth inning rally after the Chairs had scored two runs Sunday and Racine nosed out a 5 to 4 victory by hitting opportunely off Lathrop early in the game. Sheboygan had two new men in the lineup in Jennings, Minneapolis, and Lefty Russell, formerly of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Fords Cop 6-2 Victory Over Wausau

Featured by the almost airtight curving of Cotterill, the Fords broke their losing streak Sunday afternoon at the old fair grounds, defeating the Wausau team by a score of 6-2. Not until the first half of the ninth inning did the Wausau team cross the rubber. The characteristic "one-bad-inning" of the Fords was lacking, and this, coupled with Cotterill's steady work on the mound brought victory. Alpine and Kristy both drove out three-baggers.

The Ford lineup: Cotterill, pitcher; Fahmer, catcher; G. Cotterill, first; Alpine, second; Kristy, shortstop; White, third; G. Fahmer, left field; Andy, center field; Kumbier, right field.

With White on third and Fahmer back in his old post in the left garden, the defense tightened considerably.

Radio Owners Invited To Play for Program

Rio De Janeiro.—The honesty of radio fans in Brazil is the basis used by the principal broadcasting station at Rio de Janeiro for securing operating funds. Persons with sets who listen in on the programs are expected to enroll as members, the fee being $5.00 a year. There are now 2,000 members.
Broadcasting is developing slowly in Brazil due to the high duty on foreign sets. Dealers say there would be a big expansion in business if the broadcasters in the United States could force their music through the heavy sea of static which prevents Brazil listening to American entertainments.

IDEAL THEATRE

THE IDEAL'S FEATURE, "MADAME SANS GENE," MOST MAGNIFICENT PRODUCTION

Sans Gene," Most Magnificent

Sans Gene," which began a three-day run Sunday, is not only Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount production, but it is her most magnificent creation and the one and only motion picture to play a premiere on Broadway at $5.00 a seat. The history of its making may be interesting. Miss Swanson and her company were sent to France to make some scenes for "The Coast of Folly," the popular novel on which she had been working for over a year. Complications of various sorts arose and one of them was a Marquis. Gloria met him and soon he was established as interpreter and the work on the set languished. Finally it was suggested that a classic play by Victorian Sardou in which many famous actresses including Madame Rejane and Ellen Terry had starred was more worthy of Miss Swanson's histrionic abilities and "The Coast of Folly" was temporarily discarded for this Napoleonic romance. "Madame Sans Gene" (Devil May Care) and the Marquis de la Falaise interpreted more romance than was found in the script. Under his influence it is said that Gloria has really done the best work of her entire career. It was right after the completion of "Madame Sans Gene" that she became La Marquise de la Falaise and now she and her noble French hubby are working in Hollywood on "The Coast of Folly," it having been decided that the Marquis could provide sufficient French atmosphere to the California climate so that realism would not suffer. "Madame Sans Gene" unfolds against a Parisian background, the tale of a young laundress called "Devil May Care" because of her piquant manners. Napoleon, then a nobody, is one of her customers and when after the revolution, the first empire is established and Napoleon placed on the throne, Sergeant Lefebre (Charles de Roche) is named a Marshal of France. Meantime Madame Sans Gene has been wooed and won by the doughty sergeant and thus becomes a Duchess, who enlivens her new title by pranks which astonish the court and win rebuke from the Emperor who, however, forgives her when she reminds him of their past acquaintance. The climax of the play comes when she saves Napoleon from committing a bad blunder in diplomacy. Special music by the Wisconsin Rapids Quintette.

Wrinkles Removed "While You Wait"

It has been discovered that the mere application of a spoonful of powdered tarkroot mixed with a spoonful of lemon juice, actually removes wrinkles and creases in fifteen minutes or less! There's no rubbing, no work, and the expense is trifling—less than three cents! It is only necessary to spread the mixture over the face, sit down before the mirror, and watch those unwelcome marks of age, illness or worry disappear like magic. The effect is incomparably better than that produced by the most skillful massaging.

The mixture of course is perfectly harmless. While on the face a pleasant soothing sensation is experienced. It is easily washed off. Aside from its remarkable effect on wrinkles, there's nothing better for baggy cheeks or chin. No woman who purchases a package of powdered tarkroot from her druggist will regret having done so.—Adv.

POPULAR IRISH COMEDIAN AT PALACE

Probably one of the most popular and famed Irish comedians to grace any local stage in recent years, will be the appearance here of Mr. Harry Bernard featured with Ersig & Allen's big summer show and musical comedy at the Palace theatre, "Fickle Fancies", not only is Mr. Bernard phenomenal in his portrayal of the laughable side of the Irish life, but in addition to the foregoing, he produces each performance, curtain to curtain, and to that end he can be heralded as a veritable success if the present offering of this superb company can be taken as a criterion of what is to follow during the engagement here.

Mr. Bernard has been surrounded with a cast far superior to what one would expect in this popular form of amusement, augmented by specialty artists, each and every one that could do justice to themselves on any vaudeville program. No expense has been spared to make this the outstanding miniature musical comedy production of the season, enhanced with beautiful scenery, costumes and electrical effects, that, in itself alone represent an immense expenditure of money. Billy Gordon is seen to ample advantage in support and among the feminine contingent will be found, Miss Dot Leighton as Prima Donna and Miss Marge Taylor a dynamic soubrette, exemplifying the translation of all that the word Pep can signify. A chorus of pretty and shapely misses add to the versatile performances what other shows usually forget about, being picked with care and precision by the management from a vast number of applicants, and as you hear them sing and see them dance, you feel rewarded for the time you have spent and been entertained.

"Holy Roller" Street in Dayton

This is "Holy Roller Street" in Dayton—a road on the edge of town flanked by homes of members of that sect. Nightly it is load with the sound of praying and singing, and signs like the one in the circle above greet the passerby everywhere.

Dayton is Main Street and Main Street Fears the Lord

BY ALLINE SUMNER
NEA Service Writer

Dayton, Tenn.—What manner of place is this hamlet which will become "the world's intellectual center," when the prophets of a liberal Bible and the prophets of a liberal Bible are thrown to the lions on July 10?

There are certain formal statistics issued by the Dayton Progressive Club. Dayton has five Protestant churches, three banks, an Odd Fellows lodge, and a lot of two highest degreed Masons. There are no Ku Kluxers or K. of C.'s in Dayton.

Dayton has a Parent-Teachers Club, a Woman' Reader Club, the Dayton Progressive Club, one movie house and the Chautauqua comes every summer.

Dayton is proud of that. It is the smallest town on the circuit which can support a Chautauqua.

Taxes Are Low

Dayton has electric lights, a few bathrooms, paved roads—the main ones—and good city water. Its tax rate is 75 cents.

It has a hosiery factory, two canning plants, one wholesale house, and a crate factory which supplies all the baskets for the thousand cars of strawberries that go forth from Dayton's berry fields each spring.

That's formal Dayton.

To us, Dayton is America. It is Main street. A Main street with the fear of God crawled over its heart and underscored by the mighty peaks 'round about.

One of Dayton's drug stores flaunts a poster planted there by some zealot of the Anti-Evolution League.

The jet black poster is adorned with a leering papa and mama baboon.

"Shall We be Taxed to Damn Our Children?" shrieks the poster.

A few smudge faced, lank mountaineers gaze and nod approvingly. Many frown. Dayton is "agin' evolution, but she believes this is going a little too far.

Blue Laws Prevail

Blue laws prevail in Dayton on Sunday. Not even a coco cola can be bought on the parched throat. Most of the town worships God in one of the five churches.

A handful of the most daring carry on their week day pastime of "meetin' the trains." But they do it furtively. Dayton tolerates no frivolity of a Holy Sabbath.

Dayton rises with the sun at 5 and seeks its couch at 9.

In the cool of the evening, Fords and other cars jog to the valley and the river pool or maybe up the mountain, where they dance every Saturday night.

All shipping is done in Chattanooga 40 miles away. A bus goes there thrice daily. Daytonians see "all the new shows" in Chattanooga, too.

Dayton women sit on their magnolia-shaped porches of an afternoon and paint china or hem tea-towels.

There is a bridge club, too, and the Readers Club studied not only Edgar Guest last year, but read "The Green Hat" and "The Little French Girl."

Friendly To Strangers

Few Dayton women bob their hair or rouge their cheeks.

The hand of fellowship is warm in Dayton. Nothing is too much to give and do for the stranger.

A newspaper photographer came to town. He needed a dark-room. They found him a kitchen, dumped out the furniture, and built him a dark-room in an hour.

They are showing "The Kid" at the movie house tonight. But not many go. Most of the younger set talk on the corner or in Robinson's drug store.

"The center of the world." "The cynosure of all eyes."

One mile long, five blocks wide, 1800 population—and strong in the fear of the Lord!"

A ship's carpenter is called "Chips."

"Saving at the Spigot"

THAT homely old expression, with its unhappy ending, aptly describes what happens to those who look too long at the first cost of gasoline and too little at the car.

When you half-ration that car of yours with a cheap, cracked gasoline, get ready for the waste—at the bung hole of faulty service. For cracked gasoline is that last resort of those who are compelled to build up a great quantity to fit a price.

Play safe with POMIAC, the 100% natural straight-run gasoline from which no original power elements have been subtracted. Easy to start in any weather—smooth velvety action, and economical because the last atom is used in developing power. There is no unused portion to drain into the crank case and thin the oil to the detriment of your motor.

Greater Power—Longer Mileage—Better Action—all yours by turning in at the sign of the POMIAC arrow.
